

Hospital Asks $12 Million for Buildings

By JOHN R. STARR

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The State Hospital today asked the Arkansas Legislative Council for $12,050,000 in new construction money.

It proposed to spend $10,691,354 at the Little Rock unit.

The State Hospital was the first agency to go before the council in a scheduled eight-day series of hearings to determine how $11.8 million in surplus money should be spent.

Sen. Olen Hendrix of Prescott, chairman of the hospital board, said he did not want to establish construction priorities within the overall request.

"I can't tell you which buildings are good and which are bad," Hendrix said. "All the buildings at the Little Rock unit need to be replaced. They are all bad."

Under questioning by council members, Hendrix said the State Hospital probably would be satisfied if it could get $6 million for a new administration building from the current surplus.

However, he said two new treatment buildings at the Little Rock unit, with an estimated cost of $10.2 million each, are just as desperately needed.

Hendrix said the State Hospital construction program probably could be completed within two years if the hospital got the full $12 million it asked. He declined to say how the board would proceed if it got less than that amount, particularly if it gets less than the $6 million needed for the administration building.

The hospital also asked re-appropriation of $1.2 million originally allocated in an unconstitutional omnibus appropriation law. Most of this money already has been spent. The rest would be used to complete a maximum security building at the Little Rock unit.

Hendrix said the State Hospital now has about 4,600 patients, 400 less than in 1955, although the admission rate has risen 30 per cent in the last five years.

"With this rise in admission rate," he said, "if the discharge rate had remained the same we would be talking about 8,000 patients instead of 4,600."

Several legislators asked about reports of overcrowding at the Little Rock unit, which has resulted in some patients sleeping on the floor.

Schools Hire Guidance Counselor

Act 22 of the last General Assembly of Arkansas provided a means for two or more school districts to enter into co-operative compact agreements to employ personnel for special course offerings that individual school districts might be unable to offer.

Blevins, Spring Hill, and Guernsey districts of Hempstead county have entered into such compact agreement to employ a vocational guidance counselor to work 40 per cent of her time at Blevins, 30 per cent at Guernsey, and 30 per cent at Spring Hill.

She called for a return "to the tradition of individual freedom that made America great."

Ohlendorf said: "One of the cleverest deceptive temptations ever developed is the federal grant in aid matching funds where the government encourages a perfectly normal and healthy community to desire improvement for which it would rather not pay."

He added that communities are "actually, enticed to ask for federal money to pay a large part of the cost of the projects. And such aid, he added, eventually means federal control."

"Twenty-odd years ago farmers were told federal subsidies did not mean federal control," Ohlendorf said. "But now we have seen a rancher fined $4,000 for raising wheat on his own land and feeding it to his own cattle."

Rep. Dale Alford, D-Ark., was scheduled to speak at the conference today. About 500 delegates are attending the meeting, which ends Wednesday.

Dr. Davis W. Mullins, president of the University of Arkansas, spoke Monday, thanking the Farm Bureau Federation for supporting the governor's defeated $60 million construction bond issue.

"While its results were not what we had hoped," he said, "the campaign made people aware of needs."

The guidance program in no way replaces the valuable help given the students by administrators and classroom teachers; it merely coordinates the efforts of parents, teachers, students, and counselor in an attempt to help the student gain a fuller understanding of himself and be better prepared to make wise decisions about his future.

Mrs. Murrell R. Fisk has been employed for this new position. Mrs. Fisk recently moved to Hope with her husband, who is funeral director and mortician at the Oakerest Mortuary.

They have two grown sons, Gary, teaching at Mansfield, Ark., this winter, and Gerald Fisk with the U. S. Military Service. Mrs. Fisk has a B. Bureau Told U. S. Aid Also Brings Control

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP)—Federal aid brings federal control, representatives of farm and business groups told the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation's 14th annual officers and leaders conference.

Mrs. Louise Bushnell of New York City, program director of women's organizations for the National Association of Manufacturers, also warned today against centralization of power and money in the federal government.

She said local governments can do more for the same money than can the federal government.

The Arkansas Farm Bureau president, Harold F. Ohlendorf of Osceola, said Monday night that "deception going on in our country" through federal aid "threatens not only our economy but our freedom as well."

Mrs. Bushnell said the image "of a benevolent federal government with a bottomless purse is cracking." Americans, she said, are realizing "we could do more for ourselves that the government does if only we could keep that part of our incomes that the government takes from us in order to aid us."

She contended that every federal aid program brings federal controls. And she said that government costs more than food, rent or any other item in the American budget.

She called for a return "to the tradition of individual freedom that made America great."

Ohlendorf said: "One of the cleverest deceptive temptations ever developed is the federal grant in aid matching funds where the government encourages a perfectly normal and healthy community to desire improvement for which it would rather not pay."

Millions for Moon Shot Approved

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate has passed a big money bill providing a $549 million boost to U. S. efforts to send a three-man team to the moon by 1970.

The $9,096,769,500 independent offices appropriation bill now goes to a House-Senate conference group to compromise differences.

The Senate batted down all efforts to whittle the money bill. "They included a series of amendments by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., designed to cut various totals back to the amounts recommended in President Kennedy's budget request."

The Senate began work today on a $5,161,380,000 bill carrying funds for the Welfare and Labor departments.

Sen. Prescott Bush, R-Conn., says that in view of the costly defense buildup now under way he will try to trim from the bill $277,670,000 in health funds—the amount by which the bill exceeds Kennedy's original request.

The youth corps bill sent to the Senate floor far exceeds the recommendations of President Kennedy. His administration actively opposed the other measure, dubbed the "cold war veterans GI bill."

Both proposals were cleared by voice votes with strong support from Democrats on the committee. Republicans indicated solid opposition to the youth corps measure. Some GOP committee members also opposed the veterans bill.

The youth corps bill, sponsored by Sen. Robert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., would create a corps of 25 times more member pilot project proposed by Kennedy.

No Strikes in Missile Sites, Workers Told

VANDERBERG AIR FORCE BASE (AP)—Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg said today that now the United States is "under the gun" in the Berlin crisis there is no excuse for any further missile base labor stoppages.

The labor secretary, touring major bases to shore up a two-month old no-strike pledge, said that any serious breach of the pledge could result in President Kennedy seeking a legal no-strike ban from Congress.

Goldberg said, however, that the voluntary pledge is working well—that man-days a month lost to missile base labor disputes measured in many thousands a year ago is now measured in only a few hundred.

He said President Kennedy is keeping close tabs on the situation since a Senate committee headed by Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., found work stoppages and excessive overtime practices were costing delays and over-expenditures in space programs.

Kennedy, Goldberg said, expects everyone concerned with missile-space project work to do his job and to respect the no-strike, no-lockout pledge.

"This is a test we are making," the labor secretary told the local missile site labor relations committee at Strategic Air Command headquarters, Omaha, Neb., late Monday.

"But the president will have no hesitation in going to Congress for strike-banning legislation if that becomes necessary," Goldberg said.

Goldberg's theme at every stop has been that establishment of national and local missile labor settlement procedures makes strikes unnecessary. Uninterrupted and economical completion of projects in view of the world situation, is too important for that, he said.

Storms Taper Off Over the Nation

Stormy weather and heavy rains tapered off today after Monday's thunderstorms caused flash floods in many areas from southern New England to Colorado.

A violent thunderstorm hit New York City at the evening rush hour, tying up traffic, flooding subway tunnels and expressways and knocking out service on the Pennsylvania Railroad's main line to Philadelphia.

The storm, which dumped nearly one inch of rain in one hour, delayed thousands of commuters. Electric power was knocked out in 5,000 homes in Brooklyn and Queens. Airplane travel was disrupted.

Flash floods also hit the area of Johnstown, Pa., after a two-inch rainfall. Floodwaters rolled out of the southwest Virginia mountains into the town of Haysi, washing away several houses and two general stores and leaving about 50 persons homeless.

Thunderstorms caused flooding in sections of Colorado, with heavy property damage. A woman was killed by lightning in a storm near Delta in Western Colorado.

Eight inches of rain drenched Alpha, in northeast Iowa. Nearly 7 inches of rain was reported in Hawkeye, Iowa.

The storms broke out in the clash of hot, muggy air over most of the southern and the cooler, dry air in the northern regions.

Nearly two inches of rain doused Omaha, Neb., and Nantucket, Mass.

Cool air moved into the Northeast, dropping temperatures into the 40s and 50s in the northern upper Great Lakes and along the St. Lawrence Valley. Generally normal readings were reported in most other areas with hot weather continuing in most of the Southland.

BATTLE LINE—Thus far and no farther, this dramatic group of officials and plain citizens seems to be saying in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. The waters were continuing to rise in the Cedar Rapids River, rear. They raced with time to construct a temporary dike of sandbags to protect business places in the downtown street.

CAPSULES COMPARED — Drawing at left purportedly shows details of the capsule which Maj. Yuri Gagarin rode in his 108-minute flight into space. It appeared in the Communist newspaper, the London Daily Worker, whose announcement of the first manned satellite flight differed from that officially released by the Soviets. If accurate, the drawing shows that both the U.S. and Russia have reached similar solutions to the problem of getting a man into space and back again. At right is this country's Mercury capsule, which has carried a chimpanzee safely on a short, suborbital hop. An American astronaut will repeat this trip in days and go into orbit later this year.

million be spent to develop the B70 as an experimental aircraft rather than a complete weapons system.

The House Monday passed 403 to 2 the emergency resolution authorizing the President to put a quarter-million ready reservists in uniform for one year, either as individuals or in units.

The resolution, approved earlier by the Senate 75-0, also authorizes extending training periods for the 2,440,000 members of the ready reserve.

The Defense Department matched pace with Congress in expediting the swift strengthening of U.S. armed forces Kennedy called for last Tuesday.

The Pentagon announced late Monday that four Air Force bases slated for deactivation, would remain on active status—McDill in Florida, Chennault in Louisiana, Donaldson in South Carolina and Laughlin in Texas.

This is necessary to provide facilities for continued operation of B47 jet bombers which had been slated to give way to later model aircraft.

The Navy plans to add 60 vessels to the fleet, mainly for transport and antisubmarine service.

Twenty new ships will be provided from the combatant shipbuilding program, many of them destroyer-type craft for antisubmarine work. A corresponding number of older destroyers will remain in service instead of going into mothballs.

Some 40 ships are expected to be recommissioned from the mothball fleet, 22 troop and cargo transports and 18 smaller craft for antisubmarine service.

In California, Brig. Gen. Robert D. Campbell said the 148th Air National Guard Transport Wing, which he commands, expects to be called to active duty this week.

He said the wing, based at Van Nuys, Calif., will be reinforced by planes from the 138th Air Transport Squadron, based at Tulsa, Okla.

Only Reps. Bruce Alger, R-Tex. and Eugene Siler, R-Ky., voted against the resolution giving Kennedy authority to call the reserves to active duty.

An appropriation to pay for the expanded forces will come later. It will provide $3,454,600,000, including 207.6 million to start a civil defense shelter program.

Would Cut Budget Estimates

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Rep. Catherine Norrell, D-Ark., an avowed conservative, says she supports President Kennedy's preparedness program but thinks he should lower budget estimates on domestic programs.

"There is every reason to believe that the present grave situation we now face (in Berlin) will see us standing shoulder to shoulder to protect our beloved land," she said in an address at a dinner in her honor given by the Little Rock Women's Chamber of Commerce.

She said defense expenditures could be offset and a tax increase could be prevented by the trimming of some domestic programs. She also said various departments could be instructed to refrain from using the amounts of funds that have been appropriated by Congress.

Rail ire Damage Is $250,000

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Railroad officials have placed damage in the Cotton Belt Railroad shops fire Saturday at $250,000. There were no injuries.

Cause of the explosion that started the fire still has not definitely been pinpointed.

Solves Burglaries

BOURGES, France (AP)—The arrest Sunday of a mother of five has solved a two-year wave of burglaries, police said.

Police said Denise Sernuquet, 33, stole 20,000 francs—about $4,000—in 30 house burglaries. She was released to take care of her five children while awaiting trial.

Hospital Asks

Yopp said part of the overcrowding was the result of segregation of patients by sex, race and class of illness. He said the new buildings would be designed to eliminate this problem.

Representatives of various state agencies are expected to ask for a total of about $70 million in construction and operation funds before the hearings end.

Most of them will be turned down, and those that get funds will have their hoped-for supplementary budgets curtailed.

The council will report its findings to a special legislative session, probably late this month.

The council's Revenue and Taxation Committee will recommend today continuing construction fund as a means of handling the states' building needs.

The fund would be fed by revenues from the extra 12 days of horse racing at Hot Springs and by collections in excess of 102 percent from the newly tightened use tax, as well as by up to $10 million in excess revenues above the maximum $111 million allocated for state operations in each of the 1961-63 fiscal years.

The Revenue and Taxation Committee decided on the continuing construction fund in a meeting Monday. It rejected temporarily a proposal for a state income tax withholding plan. Both the withholding tax plan and the coming construction fund were proposed by Perry Rep. Paul Van Dalsem.

Sen. Tom Allen of Brinkley said the Revenue and Taxation Committee would meet later this month to again consider the withholding tax plan.

Gov. Orval E. Faubus indicated Monday he doubts if $11.7 million will take care of pressing state fiscal needs. He said he has been considering ideas for additional revenues to make more funds available for division in the special session.

He added that he did not intend to limit the special session to distributing the $11.7 million. And he indicated that he might take a part in the fiscal wrestling match. Earlier he had said it was a legislative matter.

in the head and stomach. His optic nerve was severed and he was blinded in both eyes. His condition was critical.

The ticket agent, Bill Hicks, 45, of Chico, was shot in the back.

The ticket agent, Bill Hicks, 45, of Chico, was shot in the back. He too was in critical condition.

The story began with a short-wave radio account of a 120-mile an hour chase of a speeder who out-distanced highway patrolmen. It was Britt, racing 30 miles from Corning, Calif., 30 miles northwest of Chico, in an attempt to make the Pacific Airways DC3 south-bound flight in less than 30 minutes. He didn't have time to buy a ticket and he didn't have money for one. He hadn't stopped to draw his pay at a Corning construction job.

"I thought I could bluff my way," he said.

Britt raced for the plane with the ticket agent behind him. He got aboard but Hicks ordered him off.

Witnesses said Britt jerked a pistol out of his overnight bag, shot Hicks in the back, fired twice more, then ran into the pilot's compartment, put the gun to Capt. Cleal's head and yelled: "Take off, or I'll take over."

Cleal taxied the plane down the runway at low speed.

Britt shouted: "Get this plane in the air."

Then he fired two shots into Cleal.

Copilot Allan Whetler, 29, of Burlingame, Calif., grabbed the pistol. Britt came at him with a knife.

Three passengers moved in and helped overpower Britt. They were J. Albert Hutchinson, a San Francisco attorney, who was barely missed by an earlier bullet from Britt's pistol; Clifford C. Jackson of Chico and Robert Shute of Carmichael, Calif.

Manacled, Britt explained that his wife, Melba, had asked him to come home.

"I didn't have a ticket and thought I'd run a bluff," Britt said. "I got excited when the agent told me I would have to stay off the plane, and I just started shooting. That's the last I remember."

Butte County Dist. Atty. C. Keith Lyde said Britt told him he and his wife had been separated, and she telephoned Monday to tell him she would take him back.

Britt was taken to Dewitt State Hospital in Auburn, Calif., for observation.

Miss Carolyn Brooks and Bobby Teague Exchange Vows

The wedding of Miss Carolyn Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Brooks of Hope, to Bobby Teague, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Teague of Stamps, was held in the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. J. L. Peyton. The double ceremony was performed by Rev. A. D. Livingston.

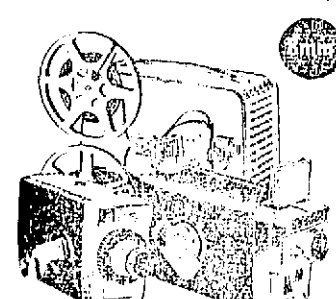

For her wedding the bride chose a dress of white nylon over tulle with a full skirt and round neckline. Her veil was attached to a matching bandeau. She wore a single strand of pearls and carried a Bible topped with white carnations.

After the ceremony a reception was held in the dining room with the color scheme of pink and white. The bride's table was overlaid with a white lace cloth. Pink carnations were placed on each side of the bride's wedding cake. Mrs. J. L. Peyton and Misses Mylene Brooks, sister of the bride, and Sandra Byers, cousin of the bride, served the punch and wedding cake.

Out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Carl Teague, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Teague, Mrs. Haskell Teague, Mrs. Thurston Teague and son Dominic of Stamps; Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Smith, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Brooks of Magnolia, and Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Lybarger of Little Rock.

Pressure on to Cut Back Spending

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic liberals are putting pressure on President Kennedy not to bow to the demands of a congressional coalition for domestic spending cuts to offset defense increases.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, the assistant Democratic leader, kicked off the campaign Monday with a Senate speech calling for long-range welfare planning to out-do Soviet Premier Khrushchev's 20-year plan.

Humphrey, who is in and out of the White House almost daily, is known to have personally urged Kennedy to stick by his New Frontier program despite efforts by Republicans and Southern Democrats to force domestic retrenchments.

Kennedy's recommendations for increased military spending in connection with the Berlin crisis were accompanied by a pledge for a balanced budget in the fiscal year beginning next July 1.

Congressional economy advocates have contended that there won't be a balanced budget unless domestic outlays are reduced sharply. Liberals argue that increased government outlays will accelerate the economy and bring in much higher Treasury revenues.

Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel of California, the assistant Republican leader, said he like Humphrey, doesn't want to stop social progress. But he said that runaway inflation might cancel any such gains if spending gets out of hand.

Humphrey said that nothing would suit Khrushchev more "than to find us going into a military buildup at the expense of strengthening our own economy and social structure."

"The military buildup, which I strongly support, must not be accomplished at the sacrifice of our domestic programs nor at the sacrifice of our long-term program to increase the living standards of the underdeveloped nations," Humphrey said.

Be True to Yourself

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen: Do you believe in marrying for security? My first marriage for love proved unhappy. But then I was only 19 and had a baby the first year. In all, there were two children by that husband—the type who would die but not work for you. Finally he left the state and I got a job to support myself and the kids. Eventually we divorced.

Eleven years ago I met a wonderful man who begged me to marry him. I hesitated because I didn't love him but, because of his insistence and because it meant security for the children and myself, I married him. There are no regrets. My children were shipped him. I had a child by him too. Never in all those years did he say, "Your kids" or "My son." It was always "Our children."

He died four years ago and, during the last 15 months of his life, was in a hospital most of the time. I kept house, held down a job and somehow managed to spend a portion of every day with him, being only too happy to repay him in a small way for the love and support he had given me. Now, save for my two boys—his and mine, I am alone; my daughter being married. The 15-year-old son by my first marriage is in high school, plays the trombone and belongs to the Boy Scouts; the little boy by my second marriage is seven and a genius—always at the head of his class. While I don't own my home, I have a car, beautiful furniture and a substantial income.

Marry again, if only for the boys sake? I don't think so, having waited 22 years to attain this independence. There is a man who idolizes me, makes good money, owns his home and a new car and has proposed marriage. But I don't love him. Maybe I don't know what real love is. Yet, three years ago I met a Navy man who stirred me as no man ever did. Bring him in on a career he didn't want to get involved, so quit writing. I still think of him! Don't get the idea that my life is empty.

were joined there for the week's outing by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rawson of Webb City, Mo.

Miss Charlotte Wiggins, manager of the local Montgomery Ward Catalog Office, is attending a two-day store meeting in Langview, Texas.

Harold Stevenson, Jr., of Paris, Texas, who has been visiting his parents in Idabel, Okla., spent Saturday in Hope with his grand-mother, Mrs. W. M. Stroud, and his aunt, Mrs. Raymond Jones.

On a drive along the edges of the base a French naval officer pointed to battle marks which scarred the portal leading into the base.

"The Tunisians are good soldiers and good fighters," he said. "Then he grinned. 'After all, we taught them how.'"

Along the roads charred vehicles showed where the first roadblocks were set up when the Tunisians tried to blockade the base.

"This is a naval technique to the officer said. 'It is a valid strategic base. And we do not want to be pushed out under force or threat of it.'"

Did he fear new fighting if the impasse between the two camps tries is not resolved soon? "I hope not," he replied. "But I have my personal view that this is not over yet."

Still Recalls That 'Worst' Disaster

By GEORGE W. HACKETT

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP)—When his body healed, Rexie Maxie came out of the desolate eastern Kentucky hills to seek peace. He hasn't found it yet.

The former coal miner's life changed seven years ago today, after a ghastly, 30-second ride in an ancient auto down one of the highest mountains of the Cumberland chain.

There were 12 passengers, including Maxie's wife and three children, but only he survived the fiery crash which the National Safety Council called the worst single auto accident in its history.

"I still can't sleep some nights thinking about it," Maxie said. "I stopped to fill a customer's order. 'I got out of mining and drifted into restaurant work after it happened.'"

Maxie remembers the excitement when his brother-in-law, Thomas Brown, bought the 13-year-old car the day before the mishap.

"Our wives wanted to see the coal mine where both of us worked so we decided to make the trip the next day. We wanted it to be a holiday."

The Maxies, Brown, his wife, their four children, and a teenage girl who lived with them crowded into the automobile and

I love to dance, bowl twice a week, belong to a couple of auxiliaries and have loads of friends. Should I exchange this freedom for a marriage which might not work? One-hundred for love? — Young At Heart

Dear Young: You write so fully, as if all the things you told me had been put inside you for a long time. I'm sure this alone has clarified your thinking. As to marrying again, I believe any woman is better off married than single. But, though no longer young myself, I'm romantic enough to believe in marrying for love. In other words, in your own self be true. I've been married twice, both times for love. However, if you're looking for independence, don't marry. Love is giving all you're capable of to the one person you believe in above all others. Perhaps you have yet to meet that person. I wouldn't take the Navy too seriously.

Forecasts Skipping Space Ships

By FRANK CAREY

Associated Press Science Writer

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP)—Space ships that could skip off the earth's atmosphere for a second try at landing in case of a re-entry go were forecast today by a government scientist.

Dr. Eugene S. Love of the Langley Research Center of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said possibilities exist for designing space craft so they could bounce off the earth's atmosphere, like a stone skipping off water, in the event the original return approach from outer space was faulty.

Addressing a space science conference at Virginia Polytechnic Institute—and amplifying in an interview— he said such a space ship might approach to within 30 miles of the earth, and then zoom off into a 300-mile-high orbit to await a new try at a more favorable landing.

Dr. Love said NASA scientists see chances of equipping space ships with special chemical jets—or even airplane flaps—so they could be positioned to get a bouncing lift from the earth's atmosphere upon entering it.

Dr. Love's speech was prepared for a conference of American and Canadian defense-research space scientists jointly sponsored by VPI, the National Science Foundation, and NASA.

He said it well could be that a manned space ship, returning from a mission to the moon or the planets, could go into the re-entry phase at a faulty angle that would carry it wide of the area where recovery forces were waiting for the pickup. In that event, he said, a skip maneuver would be indicated.

The scientist also said space ships of the future might be equipped with throwaway compartments so that the final re-started out.

All went well "until we came over the crest of Pine Mountain near Whitesburg."

"He (Brown) tried his brakes and didn't have any." The car, rolling down the steep, winding highway, bounced off one cliff to another, overturned, and burst into flames. Maxie got out a rear window. The others were trapped inside.

Maxie says the gasoline tank caught fire as he escaped. He grabbed an axe—"I still do not know where it came from"—and tried to hack an opening for the others until the heat drove him away. When he went back a second time he was pulled away by bystanders.

Maxie, burned severely over most of his body, spent months in a hospital. When he was finally released Maxie moved from town to town and finally came to Newport.

Last week the 42-year-old restaurant worker went home for the first time since the accident, but his memories drove him away again. "It'll be a long time before I return."

Maxie rides in an auto from time to time but never has learned to drive. "I don't want the responsibility,"

No Word Yet on Fort Chaffee

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP)—Army Vice Chief of Staff Gen. Clyde D. Eddleman visited deactivated Fort Chaffee near here Monday, but there was no word on whether his visit had anything to do with a proposed Army manpower buildup.

Chaffee is one of the bases mentioned as a possibility for reactivation to handle training of an increased number of draftees if the President's defense program goes through.

Eddleman inspected the 45th National Guard Infantry Division from Oklahoma Monday before attending a dinner given by the Fort Smith Chamber of Commerce. A meeting between Eddleman and Chaffee officials was closed to the press and no statement was released afterwards.

Eddleman refused to discuss the possibility that the large Army post might be reactivated. Presently, the 19th Army Corps (Reserve) consisting of 30 officers and 69 enlisted men, along with 100 civilian employees.

SUSPENSE

A Short Short Story

TRIAL BY TRAIN

By LEE PRIESLEY

The heat inside had steamed the telegraph shack window until Cass Garrett couldn't see inside. But he could hear and read the clackety-clack of the key which his fingers had worn to a shine: "Garrett seen in Bones Canyon area." Then came the warden's name.

Cass dropped from the sill, shuddering in the icy wind. He had only a few hours to find Andy Mason and persuade him to tell what he had seen. Stumbling over the ties, Cass walked into the canyon.

It had happened on a night like this one. Only a dimwit like Andy would have come out when he didn't need to, but Cass had been glad to have company on the long night trip. Then the Limited had chuffed to a stop in the sheeting rain and a masked bandit shoved up a back window. Astonishment as much as the gun held Cass and Andy motionless.

But even without the astonishment, resistance would have been useless.

The express messenger was shot as he entered and the express box snatched from his hands. The gun came spinning at Cass and the killer went out the window again. When the train crew burst in, they saw Cass, with the smoking gun he had caught, bending over the dead messenger.

When Cass had said Andy would back him up in his unbelievable story, poor frightened Andy was no longer there. Roused from his bed later, Andy denied that he had ever left it. When the empty gold dust bags were found under Cass' mattress he lost all hope.

Cass stubbed heavily in the dark and went down to hands and knees. Feeling about he knew that the rain had dropped an earth slide to block the tracks. Cautiously, for here the cut overhung the river far below, he climbed and clawed over the obstruction.

Mournful and eerie as the wind he heard the train whistle. The Limited coming from Cachetown! The slide could mean derailment, could send train and passengers to death in the swollen yellow river. But if he stopped now, it would all go for nothing.

In the death house Cass had marked off the first days of the last week, had thought of himself as a dead man already when the unbelievable chance to escape had come. Crossing the barren miles, keeping alive on mesquite beans and a chance caught lizard, and the hope that he could persuade poor scared Andy to witness that Cass Garrett was not a murderer. If he stopped now to flag the train he would rendezvous with the rope in an early dawn.

Let the train go over. If the engineer didn't put out a track walker on a night like this he deserved to lose his train. But Cass saw that his feet had decided different. Independent of his brain, they stopped to uproot a creosote bush beside the track. Cass pulled off his sodden coat to protect the feeble blaze as the rails hummed louder and louder.

When the Limited ground to a stop, sparks flying from brake shoe and stack, almost the first man off was the sheriff of Cache County. Cass wondered, but held out his wrists for the cuffs. But the sheriff wrapped his own coat around his prisoner's shoulders.

"Come inside, Cass," he said. "Now you can go down to the capitol with us to tell the governor about some new evidence in your case. I've got Andy Mason on the train and Andy's ready to talk."

Problems of Berlin Start During War

EDITORS NOTE: In this first of a series of four stories intended to illuminate the problems that make up the Berlin crisis, AP correspondent Carl Hartman, a veteran observer of the German scene, outlines the historical background of the isolated, divided, threatened city.

The Berlin Crisis—1

By CARL HARTMAN

BERLIN (AP)—Isolated, divided, threatened—these are the words most often used to describe Berlin. All of them are accurate.

But just as remarkable is one characteristic of the city that no single word can describe. It is the only place on earth where you can walk across the street from communism into the Western world, and vice versa.

This is a legacy from Adolf Hitler and the Nazis whose swastika banners flew in Berlin from 1933 until the country was driven to collapse in 1945.

The Red army occupied the city in the closing days of World War II but then turned over a little more than half the city to the Americans, French and British allies.

This division in defeat was a low point for a city that had once been the capital of efficient Prussian monarchs and steady German emperors. Hitler was the last ruler of a united Germany to ride in triumph along its broad boulevards.

The Nazi dictator built a new chancellery in what was then the center of the city, next to the president's palace, near the U.S., British, French and Soviet embassies. Western bombers and Russian artillery destroyed them all, along with 43 per cent of all the housing in the city. All that is left of the chancellery now is a little grass-covered hill just inside the border of the Soviet sector—East Berlin.

Less than a year before Hitler's body was burned in his chancellery garden, his major enemies agreed to divide the city. The Western allies got the more populous half, with some of the best living quarters. The Soviet sector included the central district of government buildings and shops, but there was little left of them.

The system of four-power rule did not last in Berlin. By 1948, East and West Berlin had separate currencies and city governments. They were soon to have separate — and unconnected — telephone, electric power and surface transport systems. Subway and elevated trains, however, continued to run through both parts of the city. There was little interference with pedestrians and private cars. The only time the Iron Curtain was effectively rolled down was for a few days during the anti-Communist uprising of 1953.

But the Communists isolated West Berlin much more effectively from West Germany. This was easy, since the city lies in the middle of Soviet-controlled East Germany, with the rest of the Western world 110 miles away.

The Communists permitted contact between West Berlin and West Germany only across two canals, four roads, four rail lines and three air corridors. Communist East Germans took control of the overland routes, except for a small amount of Western military traffic. The Soviets continued to work with the three Western allies in controlling the air lanes through the Berlin Air Safety Center.

In June 1948, the Communists blocked everything but the air corridors and the "knapsack-lift" — smuggling. For 11 months a Western airlift—mainly American—supplied West Berlin's 2 1/2 million citizens.

Rations and fuel were short, but there was no talk of giving in to Communist pressure.

After the blockade ended, Western authorities set about building up stockpiles of everything a city needs from hairpins to the bulky and uneconomic brown coal that heats so many Berlin homes. Supplies for about 18 months were accumulated.

It was after the blockade, too, that West Germany's "economic miracle" spread to Berlin and developed the contrast between the East and West sectors. Now anyone can see it by taking a short ride on the elevated.

West Berlin is a city of new buildings, has heavily stocked and even luxurious shops. Streets are filled with well-dressed people and there is the beginning of a traffic problem. The air of prosperity is none the less genuine for being based on heavy subsidies from West Germany and the United States.

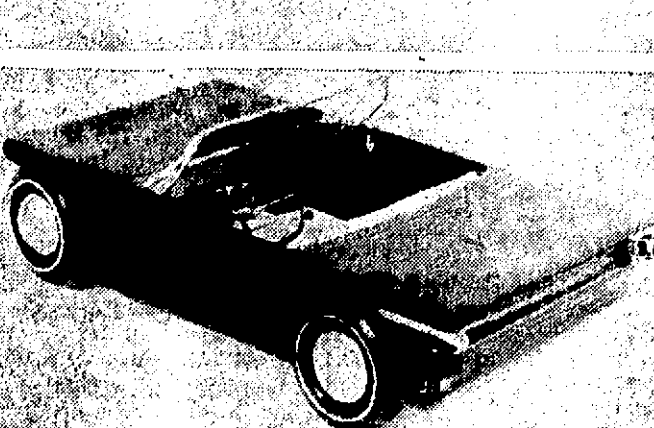

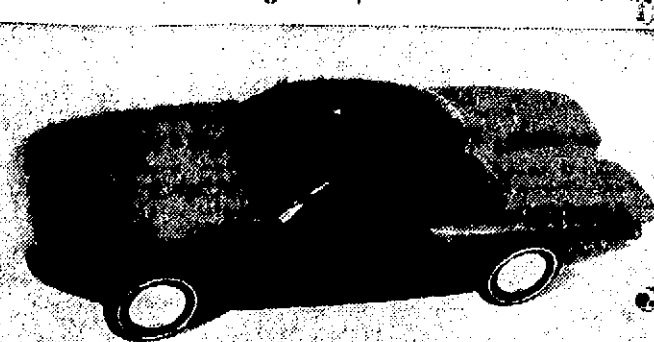

East Berlin has much less to show in the way of construction, least of all in what was once the heart of the city. Wilhelmstrasse and Unter den Linden, the great names among Berlin streets, are dead. Shops are poorly stocked and the stock is shabby. There are few people on the streets and their clothes, though adequate, are weary-looking. Cars are scarce.

Hundreds of refugees have been coming over to West Berlin every day, and at peak periods the daily figure has topped the 1,000 mark. Though they have had to leave behind almost everything they owned, they have had good prospects for jobs.

The flight of refugees has hit their economy and their propaganda. West Germans are fond of saying that although voters don't have any opportunity for choice in an election on Communist territory, a great many people from there have learned to "vote with their feet." In recent years, about the only practical place to do this has been Berlin.

Communism a Way Off for Russians

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — Real communism for the Russians is still a long way off. They try to make it look otherwise. It won't stick.

In the 44 years since the revolution they've had socialism. Communism is still only a dream.

Nevertheless the Russian Communist party over the weekend released its program for the next 20 years. It holds out rich promise of a better and easier life.

Some Westerners, used to sneering at anything Soviet, are apt to call it pie in the sky stuff. There's no reason to.

Since the revolution in 1917 the Communist party in Russia has worked miracles.

True, the miracles had bloody foundations: purges, liquidations, a whole generation of people kept at the grindstone and to a living standard far below this country's.

But the progress made is indisputable. Even greater progress can be expected.

If some of the program promises are made good they can be expected to affect other areas of the world in one way or another. For instance: the promise of free medicine, free housing.

The United States and Russia are in a contest for the minds of men through foreign aid to backward counties. The backward people, anxious to come abreast of the 20th century fast, may be more influenced by the progress in the two giants.

But the Russian Communist party goes too far when it says in its program: "The present generation of Soviet people shall live under communism."

"Socialism has triumphed in the Soviet Union completely and finally, within two decades, the Communist society will on the whole be built in the U.S.S.R."

Communism means a classless society where people get paid not in accordance with their work or coming over to West Berlin every day, and at peak periods the daily figure has topped the 1,000 mark. Though they have had to leave behind almost everything they owned, they have had good prospects for jobs.

The flight of refugees has hit their economy and their propaganda. West Germans are fond of saying that although voters don't have any opportunity for choice in an election on Communist territory, a great many people from there have learned to "vote with their feet." In recent years, about the only practical place to do this has been Berlin.

Stalin himself said "we cannot tolerate a situation where a railway locomotive driver earns only as much as a copying clerk."

Marx and Lenin both said the difference between skilled and unskilled labor would exist under socialism, even after classes had been abolished, that only under communism would this difference disappear and wages be paid according to need.

So, before the Russians start changing their pay scales, they'll have to abolish classes. That will take some doing. Once a group gets into a favored position it doesn't yield easily. And there are a lot of favored groups in Russia.

CHICAGO (AP) — American All-Stars agreed today never had seen a pitcher like Miller—and hoped they never again.

ggers Rocky Colavito, Mantle and Roy Sievers, spoken admiration of the eleventh-hour relief ace after today's 1-1 rain-rattled tie in the 1961 All-Star game.

New York Yankee Whitey Ford, brilliant 19-game winning pitcher, praised the work of a low craftsman. "I saw in the bullpen and marvelled at the way he got those guys out."

"He's amazing," Sievers said. "One moment I saw a pitch coming right over the plate as fast as a grapefruit. But when I swung it wasn't there."

Sievers, Chicago veteran, was Miller's strikeline victim for the third out in the ninth with the winning run on second base.

All the batters agreed Miller was a magician with his pitches ranging from slow to searing. He didn't overpower anybody. "They're all tough," Colavito said of the National League pitchers. "Miller's tough like the rest of them, maybe more. He has lots of moves, lots of motion."

Mantle, who struck out in the American League's ninth-inning rally that just didn't jell, echoed Colavito. "He's got that change-up that's real tough, keeps you off balance, does a lot of things out there."

Miller allowed only one hit in the three innings he worked, a leadoff single to Al Kaline in the

Barber Used
Putter to Win the PGA

By DON WEISS
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Jerry Barber of Los Angeles, a sowed-off little guy with a whiffed-down magic putter and a tell-all card file, is the PGA golf champion today after firing a 67 and beating young Don January by one stroke in a par-lusting 18-hole playoff at Olympia Fields Country Club.

Oldest PGA champion ever at 45 and one of the smallest at 5-4 and 137 pounds, the never-quit son of an Illinois farmer finally got the title he let get away two years ago.

Barber, who said he got serious about golf at the age of 14, when he read of Bobby Jones' grand slam, did it with putting and a cardfile of Olympia Fields' North Course he made during practice rounds.

"I picked up the idea from Gene Andrews, a good amateur out our way, about three years ago," he said. "I pace off each course, chart it and it tells me to the yard just how far every point is from the green."

That kept him out of serious trouble all during the tournament. The putter put him up in the headlines. First, he pulled even with the lean, lanky January on Sunday by sinking incredible putts on the last three holes.

Then, in the playoff Monday while another hot sun baked the rain-softened, 6,722-yard, par 35-37 course in Chicago's south suburbs, Jerry twice came from two strokes behind. He finally wrapped up his first major title when, after getting birdies on three of the previous five holes, he hit a pressure 3-iron shot out of a fairway trap to within 18 feet of the cup on the last hole.

January, 31, four regular from Dallas, had a similar trap shot but couldn't bring it off. He caught another trap near the green, pitched up to within 10 feet and missed the putt. He had 34-34-68.

Pro at the Wilshire Country Club at Los Angeles the last seven years, Barber was a farmer, hotel clerk, printer and lathe operator before turning pro golfer. He operated golf driving ranges in California for several years, practiced putting by street light into the night, and finally tuned his game enough to become a ninth. Then he struck out Mantle, Kaline stole second while he was in the process of striking out Elston Howard. Sievers, a pinch hitter, was his last victim.

Richards Is Unhappy With Game's Ending

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Admittedly unhappy over what he called an "unsatisfactory ending," perfectionist Paul Richards, the American League All-Star manager, today expressed pleasure over at least one aspect of Monday's rain-rattled 1-1 tie at Fenway Park.

"I am happy to report that the American League team, to a man, certainly is deserving of no criticism," he said.

"The boys had a little different outlook on this game. I thought I could detect a little more determination."

Was Richards implying that the American League stars had not given their best efforts in the first All-Star game, won by the National League, 5-4, in San Francisco, two weeks ago?

"Well," said Richards measuring every word, "it might have been more imagination on my part, or perhaps I felt the way I did because it was my first All-Star game as manager and I wanted so badly to win it, but I honestly felt there was not as much anxiety and determination as in this second game."

The tie was a bitter disappointment to Richards.

"A high hopper and an infield scratch single was the difference between a brilliant 1-0 shutout and an unsatisfactory tie," he said. "It's too bad the game could not have been played to a conclusion."

The high hopper and the scratch single took place in the sixth inning when the Nationals overcame a 1-0 American League lead built up by Rocky Colavito's first-inning home run off right-hander Bob Purkey of Cincinnati.

After Henry Aaron had grounded out to open the sixth, Eddie Mathews walked, Willie Mays flied out but Don Schwall, Boston's precocious rookie right-hander, hit Orlando Cepeda with an errant pitch, and Eddie Kasko beat out a high bounce to short.

Bill White, who got two of the national's five hits, then singled behind second base, to score Mathews with the tying run.

Until then, the Nationals had been held in check by Detroit's Jim Bunning, who pitched three perfect innings, and Schwall, who kept Mays and company from crossing the plate despite three hits in the fourth and fifth innings. Minnesota's Camilo Pascual nearly duplicated Bunning's perfect pitching, yielding only a base on balls and striking out four in the final three innings.

Four national league pitchers limited the opposition to four hits. Stu Miller, the little San Francisco hurler, turned in the most brilliant job of all. He fanned five of the ten batters he faced, including Mickey Mantle, Ellie Howard and pinch hitter Roy Sievers after Al Kaline had singled to open the last half of the ninth.

Indians are believed to have come to the Mesa Verde region in Colorado about a year after the birth of Christ. They were a peaceful industrious people who kept turkeys and raised corn, squash and beans.

Grid Time
Just Around the Corner

CHICAGO (AP) — It's college All-Star football week and time for another look at memory lane, and heroes of the past.

Remember such names as Sammy Baugh? Gaynell Tinsley? Tommy Harmon? Jackie Robinson? Otto Graham? Elroy Hirsch? Buddy Young? Charlie Justice? Ted Wead? Bobby Conrad? Bobby Mitchell?

When the All-Stars take on the champion Philadelphia Eagles in Soldier Field Friday night who knows but there may be another name or two to add to the illustrious list of past heroes.

The All-Stars are boasting a powerful team this year and are given an excellent chance of upsetting the Eagles. And there are plenty of candidates for the hero list.

It could be hard-running Joe Bellino of Navy or such able passers as Bill Kilmer of UCLA or Norman Sneed of Wake Forest. There's Bill Brown, a powerful fullback from Illinois, and Tom Matte, an Ohio State back who also can pass.

It could be Mike Ditka of Pitt, or Earl Faison of Indiana or El Kimbrough of Northwestern or Marlin McKeever of Southern Cal—some of the finest ends in college circles last fall.

Or the hero could be a lineman like Houston Antwine of Southern Illinois, Myron Pollios of Notre Dame, Greg Larson of Minnesota, Earnest Ladd of Grambling or Ken Rice of Auburn.

Officials in
Ga. Election
Are Indicted

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department today announced the indictment of two election officials and 14 poll workers in Tallapoosa County, Ga., on charges of casting and counting fraudulent ballots in last November's presidential election.

The indictment was returned by a federal grand jury in Savannah, Ga.

Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy issued a rescript saying that the county's Board of Registrars and the deputy registrar failed to register voters properly or purge voter lists of ineligible names.

The first count, charging conspiracy against the rights of citizens, named 16 defendants. They included Judge Eli Wilcox, of the Court of Ordinary (a probate court), who was responsible for general supervision of the election, and Lewis B. Seay, clerk of the Tallapoosa Superior Court.

Fourteen pollholders, or poll workers also were charged in that count, as well as a second count charging deprivation of rights.

Kennedy said the indictment charged that all the defendants conspired to cast and count and permit others "to cast and count forged, fraudulent and fictitious votes for presidential and vice presidential electors."

The second count charged the 14 pollholders with executing the conspiracy, by casting and counting the fictitious votes.

Reunion events will include the second annual Old Fiddlers Contest, two beauty pageants, a tour of nearby Grocers Ferry Dam, band concerts and a dance. The reunion will climax with a fireworks display Saturday night.
